Two Trees: The Cosmic Christmas Story

Λέγω ὑμῖν, ἐὰν οὗτοι σιωπήσουσιν, οἱ λίθοι κράξουσιν.

I tell you, if these keep silent, the stones will cry out.

Luke 19:40

The crowd was shouting "Hosanna!" as Jesus rode into Jerusalem. When they were told to be quiet, He said the stones would shout instead.

Silicon is stone. These songs were made by machines and offered to God.
Wholly synthetic. Holy anyway.

Спасибо за вдохновение, мой друг Алекс!

The story

Christmas is usually told from the stable. This album tells it bigger: from before the first morning, through a manger, a temple, a massacre and an escape, to a tree on a hill and a war in heaven. Same story. Wider lens.

The tracks

1 The Word Became Flesh

John 1:1–14

In the beginning, there was the Word. The voice that called light out of the dark came down and moved in next door.

2 Prince of Peace

Isaiah 9:2–7

Seven hundred years before Bethlehem, a prophet saw a great light over a dark land. A child born, a son given, carrying names no ordinary king could carry.

3 Scatter the Proud

Luke 1:46–55 (the Magnificat)

We picture Mary meek and mild. She wasn't. A teenage girl, pregnant before her wedding, in an occupied country, sings that God pulls the mighty off their thrones and sends the rich away empty. We gave her a bold voice, stomping boots and a slide guitar.

4 Glory in the Highest

Luke 2:8–20

The first to hear the news were shepherds on the night shift, nobody's idea of important people. Then the sky filled with an army, singing.

5 Come and See

Luke 2:15; John 1:14; Psalm 95:6

"Let's go and see," the shepherds said. It's still the invitation: come as you are.

6 Now Let Your Servant Go

Luke 2:25–35

Forty days old, in the temple. An old man who has waited all his life holds the baby and is ready to go in peace. Then he tells Mary a sword will pierce her soul. She heard it, and she stayed: thirty-three years later she stood at the foot of the Cross while it did.

7 Found the Way

Matthew 2:1–12; John 14:6

Stargazers from the east follow a light to a small house, kneel on a dusty floor, and go home by another road. The Way they found had a name.

8 Herod's Rage

Matthew 2:16–18

No "Silent Night" about this event. A cowardly tyrant massacres all the little boys in Bethlehem, and their mothers weep and will not be comforted. We don't forget that.

9 Out of Egypt

Matthew 2:13–15; Hosea 11:1

A hunted refugee runs through the night, her baby held tight to her chest. The family walks Israel's old road backwards, down into Egypt. Mary sings the promise that will bring them home: "Out of Egypt I called My Son."

10 Two Trees

Genesis 3; 1 Peter 2:24; Revelation 22:2

A tree in a garden, where it all went wrong. A tree on a hill, where it was put right. And a Christmas tree, reminding us that the greatest gift of all was sent to die for us on the Cross.

11 The Dragon and the Child

Revelation 12

The timeless story from heaven's view. A woman clothed with the sun, a dragon waiting at the cradle, and war in the sky. The Child is born, and the dragon falls.

About Mary and Joseph

Mary sings twice on this album, and neither song is soft. An unwed mother, pregnant under suspicious circumstances. Ninety miles on the road, heavily pregnant. Gave birth homeless, among livestock. Ran for her life as a refugee with a newborn in her arms. Dietrich Bonhoeffer, preaching in Advent 1933, said this is no gentle, dreamy Mary, but a passionate, revolutionary one. Tough as nails.

Not one word of Joseph's is recorded. He didn't need any. His fiancée turns up pregnant, and he isn't the father. He still moves to spare her disgrace. Four times God speaks to him in a dream. Four times he gets up and obeys, once in the dead of night with Herod's soldiers on the way. He raises a Son who isn't his as his own, and teaches Him his trade. Solid.

About Jesus

This whole album is about Jesus. So is all of creation. We believe He is the Son of God, the Word who became flesh. He gave Himself on the Cross to bring us back to God, and He rose again. At Christmas we look back at the night God was born as one of us, and we marvel at a love that came against all odds.

That love is for you. Not because you earned it. Because He came for you.

If something in these songs stirred you, don't leave it there. Talk to Him. Tell Him you need Him, and ask Him in. Then read His story for yourself; start with the Gospel of Luke. Find a church, or a friend who follows Jesus, and tell them.

"To all who received Him, He gave the right to become children of God." John 1:12

The stones are crying out. Now it's your turn.
